Commission Charged On Own Commission

Final Steps Taken By Council To Pay For Strigley St. Well

James Proctor & Redfern secured approval for an account of $1,770 for their services with regard to the new Strigley St. well, at a meeting of the town council on Monday evening.

This included $750 for the expenses of S. H. Pepler as resident engineer here for four months in the winter of 1935-36. This cost his firm $900, said W. B. Redfern, town engineer, but they were absorbing part of the cost.

The remaining $1,020 represented a six per cent commission on the total cost of the well estimated at $17,000. The $17,000 included Mr. Redfern's bill of $1,770, but did not include $3,000 paid by the International Water Supply Co. as their half of the cost of the iron removal plant.

"What is the commission on a building job?" asked Reeve Dr. L. W. Dales.

"Six per cent on a job of that size," said Mr. Redfern. "Five per cent on a bigger job. Wells are particularly difficult. We charge five per cent on your other work."

"You are really charging commission on your own account," said N. L. Mathews, K. C., clerk and solicitor.

"That's right," said Mr. Redfern.

"You really have a plant that is worth $20,000," said Mr. Redfern.

"How big a job do we have to have to get five per cent?" asked Dr. Dales.

"This is the only time we have charged you six per cent," said Mr. Redfern. "We can't make a living at five per cent on a well job."

JUNIORS PLAN DANCE

Mount Albert Junior Farmers are holding a dance at Cedar Beach Gardens, north side of Musselman's Lake, on Wednesday, Sept. 28. Bill Williamson's orchestra and Jack Manley will be present to give everybody a good time.

"I don't think you should charge commission on your own commission," said Deputy-Reeve Joseph Vale.

"Well, leave out the $1,770 and put in the $3,000," replied Mr. Redfern.

The account was passed.

"You have given us good service," said Dr. Dales.

Approval was given to payment of a balance of $2,117.18 to the International Water Supply Co.

A by-law was read for issuing debentures of $17,000 to pay for the well.

"We pay $1,000 principal and the interest each year," explained Mr. Mathews. "The issue will be paid off in 17 years. We could have paid $2,000 a year, but it wouldn't have worked out even. In a few years a number of present debentures will be paid off. We will be better able to stand it."

"We are also getting a very low rate of interest. As far back as I can find, we have never borrowed for less than five per cent, and this is for three and a half per cent. It was suggested that we borrow this money a year ago. We were going to issue four per cent bonds and sell them at par. I advised against that. These bonds are for three and a half and sold for $100.50. The next best offer was 99 1/2%."

Chief Responsibility Not Town's, Engineer Believes

Owners Have To Worry About Wall, Mayor Thinks

Primary responsibility for the wall alongside the creek at Timothy St. rests with the property-owners, although the town might have some liability as the result of the water being directed by the bridge, W. B. Redfern, town engineer, reported to the town council on Monday evening.

"It's a tough little piece of wall," said Mr. Redfern. "It is about 100 feet long and 16 feet high. The minimum cost would be $2,700."

"Now you are concerned about who is responsible. Generally speaking, I would say the owners are responsible, that it is up to them to keep the water from eating away the bank. But in this case that bridge directs the water against the bank, and the town or the Toronto and York Roads Commission would to some extent be responsible."

"Would the dam affect the wall?" asked N. L. Mathews, K. C., clerk and solicitor.

"No, the dam would tend to conserve the water and protect the wall," answered Mr. Redfern. "Who did the wall that fell down?" asked Mayor Dr. S. J. Boyd.

"A Mr. Wallace owned the property at the time and he built the wall, the town supplying the materials," said Councillor Arthur Evans.

"That wall was poorly built from an engineering point of view," said Mr. Redfern.

"The town's liability is very small anyway," said Dr. Boyd. "I remember for years when there was no wall. The water went away all right. The ground is frozen in the spring of the year."

"What would piles cost?" asked Reeve Dr. L. W. Dales.

"Not nearly as much as concrete," Mr. Redfern said. He promised to make an estimate of the cost of piles and piling.

"I think piles would make a feasible compromise," said Dr. Dales.

Later in the evening Mr. Evans asked what action the council proposed to take.

"Do nothing," said Dr. Boyd. "The engineer has said that we have no responsibility."

"What are we going to say to the property owners?" asked Mr. Evans.

"Let them look out for themselves," said Dr. Boyd.

"We are not responsible," said Councillor Wm. Dixon.

CHOIR HOLDS SURPRISE PARTY AT MORRIS HOME

The members of Trinity United church choir assembled in a body at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Morris, Prospect Ave., on Thursday evening.

There was a program of games and stunts which was greatly enjoyed.

During the evening the newly-weds were presented with a beautiful table lamp. Mr. Morris made a suitable reply. Refreshments were served at the close.

Era printing costs little.

"All right," said Mr. Evans, and the subject was dropped.

Mr. Redfern recommended that the Niagara and Simcoe Sts. sewers be laid by day labor rather than by contract. He suggested taking on only a few men until the job was well started.

Councillor Wm. Dixon brought in the necessary resolution to proceed with the work.

"What are you going to pay?" asked Dr. Boyd.

"Thirty to 35 cents," said Mr. Dixon. He said he had to pay "key men" more than others.

"At that time of year, you can get all kinds of men for 25 cents," said Dr. Boyd.

RUSS. SUPPORT STIFFENS BACK OF REPUBLIC

Distinguished Traveller Will Speak Here Next Week

A writer and traveller, with an intimate knowledge of European affairs, Col. Frederick James Miles, D. S. O., O. B. E., will speak at the Christian church next Tuesday evening.

The occasion will be one of the missionary conference meetings of the Gospel Tabernacle. Col. Miles lives in London and edits a publication called "Friend of the Russians." He has written many travel books.

In Toronto he was interviewed by R. E. Knowles of the Toronto Star. The interview in part follows.

"Tell me, please, which would be Russia's natural alliance, should war actually come?" "Russia would ally herself," he replied, "with any Communist country—if it had any power."

"Which country, next, could be so described?" "France, pre-eminently. Also Czechoslovakia. A natural alignment would be that of France, Russia, and Czechoslovakia."

"Does that last-named know this?" "Absolutely—and it goes a long way to stiffen their backbone in the present crisis."

"What, in your opinion, is, supremely, back of Germany's zeal to get a foothold in Czechoslovakia?" "The Skoda munition works, best in the world."

"Thinks Mistake Made"

"Do you think things might have been better had the Versailles council accepted President Wilson's desire to give conquered Germany a chance for her life?" "I do. The stern policy adopted, in the long run, has created more problems than it solved."

"Cannot Germany," I reverted, "provide her own munition works, without coveting those of Czechoslovakia?"

"No. Germany could not stand up to a lengthy war at the present time. For two reasons: she doesn't raise enough food herself for her population—is dependent on Holland and Denmark, for instance, for butter, eggs and cheese. And, of recent years, she's been too poor to buy them."

"And what's the other reason?" "That she doesn't produce enough munitions, within her own borders, to suffice for a major campaign. And, if at war, her credit would be nil."

"Please tell me this, thou traveller extraordinary—has Hitler's demand, in re Sudeten claims and concessions, any basic features which, by and large, give his demand the element of reasonableness?"

"Yes," was the reply, "he has some grounds for the stand he takes, with at least a flavor of justification. It is based, I should say, upon Woodrow Wilson's contentions on behalf of the 'self-determination' of small nations and of minorities. You see, about three and a half millions of people are concerned—who border Germany—but have, approximately, an equal link with Czechoslovakia."

"In your opinion, is Hitler convinced, in his own mind, of the justice of his claim?" "That, just two know."

"Namely, who?" "God—and Hitler."

"Then you think that, in some regards, Hitler's case is somewhat worthy?" "In some regards—yes."

Would Aid Czechs

"What, in your opinion, would be the part Russia, if involved, would probably play?" "My opinion is that she would befriend Czechoslovakia. Yonder, there is a section of that country—it is known as Carpathian-Russia, running along the Carpathian mountains. It is almost entirely populated by Russians; that tells its own tale."

"In terms of war, is Russia a factor to be reckoned with?"

MAKE POTATO TESTS AT MOUNT ALBERT

Variety tests are being carried out for the benefit of the potato growers of the district on the farm of Douglas Campbell, Mount Albert, who stands at the right. The tests, directed by J. T. Cassin, left, potato fieldman for the Ontario department of agriculture, are being carried out by the agricultural committee of county council, in co-operation with the local agricultural representative, W. M. Cockburn. Above is seen a field of Dooleys.

Mice Make Another Hole Into High School Vault

Break - In Experts Make Clean - Up At High And Public Schools

No arrest had been made today by police as result of investigation of break-ins at Newmarket high school and King George public school last Thursday or Friday.

Chief Constable James Sloss, County Constable Ronald Watt and Constable Kenneth Mount investigated the two breaks.

At the high school, the marauders broke through the vault wall just below the point where the same or different parties burrowed through last year. They took $30 or $35 from the high school and a stop-watch.

At the King George school they took $17 from a locker in the principal's office. A door was left unlocked and it was thought by police that a skeleton key had been used to gain an entry.

SCOUTS TAKE CHARGE AT SUNDAY-SCHOOL

An interesting session was held at the Christian church on Sunday afternoon, when Scout Sunday was held. Scoutmaster Frank Hope was in charge of the meeting, for which the program had been prepared entirely by the scouts.

Scoutmaster Bill Nankiville, who is leaving shortly to attend the Ontario Agricultural College at Guelph, gave an interesting talk on the effects of scouting on the boy and on the community. The Sunday-school's support for the troop was evidenced in the large collection which was donated to them.

WILL HOLD BAZAAR

The Ladies' Aid of St. Paul's church will hold their annual bazaar on Friday, Nov. 18. Advt.

Shouldn't Be Generous With Public Funds, Declares Mayor

When a bill for $1 for four hours work for scrubbing the floor at the police station came before the council on Monday evening, Reeve Dr. L. W. Dales changed it to $2.

"You can't do business that way when you are using public money," said Mayor Dr. S. J. Boyd.

"I think it's worth that," said Dr. Dales.

"She has worked four hours and if that is the rate paid for that type of work that's all you should pay her," said Dr. Boyd.

"I think we can set a value on that work," said Dr. Dales. "We will get it done, not too often, but whenever it is necessary."

Mayor Boyd still disapproved, but the item went through with Dr. Dales remarking that earlier in the evening the council had paid the town engineer six per cent commission on the new well.

YOUNG FARMER LETS LOOSE A FEW THOUGHTS

Shingling Schomberg Better Than Shelling Schomberg, He Thinks

By LEONARD HARMAN

So Allan Mills has been hitting the headlines. It came as a shock to hear our radio blare out the statement that it should be hard to persuade him that crime does not pay. The news sleuths thought they had a real scoop. Our young Newmarket lawyer has been acting as clerk of the local police court. The burden of cases has kept him working day and night; so he got a raise in pay.

No doubt Mr. Mills would much rather spend his time drawing up wills and providing a host of legal services for the local citizenry than listing drunks or recording rows. One wonders just what is causing all the work for the local courts. A bit of a crime wave? An increase in the effectiveness of the local police? Or is it just a matter of bringing the traffic on Yonge St. under control?

I have no doubt, too, that Constables Sloss and Watt would rather spend their time directing traffic or checking the night locks on Newmarket stores than arguing with local bootleggers.

If they wouldn't they have changed a lot since they and I attended high school together. But other matters require their time. I realize this when I learn of a contemptible act of petty thieving in my own peaceful neighborhood. Such a local event, when piled on the dangerous reports from Europe, certainly does not improve one's faith in humanity.

The new novel by Ethel Chapman, "With Flame of Freedom," contains a number of ideas on the problem of crime. The book seems to point to developing our courts as clinics of conduct where arrangements are made for law-breakers which should help to make them valuable citizens.

Training, adjustment, and friendship seems to be their means of reform. The old idea of state revenge is severely scored. Of course, this is only one of the progressive ideas with which Ethel Chapman has packed her book. She has written quite a study of rural life as well as a very interesting yarn.

Reading "With Flame of Freedom" has made me wonder just what kind of places our institutions of detention might be. I have never been in a jail. I am quite unacquainted with the way our country deals with "the people who get caught." I have seen the boys at Langstaff spilling thistles in a small army. I have seen them beautifying the landscape.

Occasionally I travel the highway from Yonge St. to Markham. As I approach the high railroad crossing double signs remind me of the place where the veteran cattleman, Robert Miller, was killed by a train. I always look up at the big brick building with its numerous inmates and wonder why some of the boys couldn't be employed for a while excavating a nice new subway under the tracks.

Of course that's only a thought; but Victor Hugo or somebody did say that a thought is mightier than armies when its time has come. I've been doing some shingling lately and may be unduly impressed with the building of things. Now instead of trying to shell Schomberg in the recent military "games," how much better it would have been to have shingled Schomberg.

And when Schomberg had been shingled there could have been something about the soldiers that would have led them to paint the village, red or any other suitable color. And instead of throwing little bags of flour at each other they could have baked bread for some of our undernourished children. I looked into the blank faces of several the other day in one of North York's slums and I still shudder.

But then, as I just said, I've been doing some shingling lately and may be unduly impressed by the idea of building things.

Called For Darkness Tied End Of Eighth

All-Star Simcoe Team Shows Real Tough Opposition

Newmarket and All-stars are still unable to decide who is the better team. Another tie game resulted when these teams met at Keswick last evening.

The game ended 6-6 at the end of the eighth inning, when the game was called on account of darkness.

McNeil of Willow Beach pitched the game for the All-stars, and Niles was assigned the pitching duties for the Redmen. Cain collected three hits for the Newmarket team, and Waldon hit a home run for the All-Stars.

The boys managed by Spillette are beginning to feel that this All-Star team are going to be hard to take, and it is very doubtful who the champions of York county will be. The next game of the series will be played in Newmarket on Friday night and the team handled by Managers Trivett and Newfield are determined to take the Redmen.

Mitchell Of All-Stars Deserved Better Than Tie

First Game of Newmarket And Gwillimbury Boys Tied

An all-star team from the Lake Simcoe League played a tie game with the Newmarket team, the score being 9-9, here on Friday.

Mitchell, of the league champion Mount Albert team, made the going hard for the "Holmes and Spillette" boys and deserved better fate than a tie game. The hitting of Connell and Waldon stood out for the all-star team, and Brammer was the choice of the Newmarket boys, making many nice fielding plays. Represented on the all-star team were Mount Albert, Keswick, Sharon, Willow Beach, Baldwin, Queensville.

All-stars: Mitchell (M. A.) p; Smith (S) c; Tomlinson (K) 1b; Boag (Queensville) 2b; Connell (K) ss; Neufeldt (S) 3b; Waldon (K) lf; Hodgins (K) cf; Powell (W. B.) rf; Anderson (B) rf.

Newmarket: Cain, 1b; Brammer, 2b; Hilton, ss; Trivett, 3b; Giles, lf; Cunningham and Smith, cf; Gibney and Peters, rf; VanZant, p; Burkholder, c.

IN DEFENCE OF MR. KING

Prime Minister Mackenzie King has been exposed to unfair criticism from those who would have Canada rush into the complicated Sudeten question. Demands that Mr. King should declare that if Britain wars, Canada wars, are demands that a public man should abandon the pledges he has repeatedly made on behalf of the party he leads. Mr. King has promised that a Liberal government will not commit Canada to war without consulting parliament. That pledge was made in response to a strong public feeling of revulsion toward war, and should not be broken just because in a crisis a somewhat different feeling seems to have gained uppermost place. The opinion reached after years of reconsideration of the issues and outcome of the Great War is likely to be much sounder than the snap judgment of this moment of international tension.

Could Call Parliament

It would be fair for those who desire Canada to play a part in the Sudeten issue to ask that Mr. King call a session of parliament so that he might with parliament's approval declare that Canada stands foursquare with Britain. For ourselves, we hope that he doesn't call parliament, for there is no doubt in our mind as to where the majority of members of our present parliament stand, and a declaration of loyalty from Canada at the moment would, in our opinion, but add fuel to the fires of international hatred which threaten to bring us all in sorrow to another Great War and another Great Depression.

A Cultured Country

Reading a little something of the history of Czechoslovakia, we feel that we were hardly justified last week in calling this country "an illegitimate child of the treaty of Versailles," except that it was mothered by the League of Nations and fathered by Uncle Sam and although the banns were called at Versailles Uncle Sam has never gone to the altar at Geneva. The four little provinces now making up Czechoslovakia, Bohemia, Moravia, Silesia and Slovakia, were part of the Austro-Hungarian empire before the great war but before their conquest centuries ago they had a national existence of their own. The people of the four provinces are of the Slavic race, but the Bohemians or Czechs are much above their fellow countrymen in education and culture. They are highly cultured and speak an exceptionally fine language of great utility and refinement, which is said to rank next to Italian in musical value. Prague, the capital city of Czechoslovakia, is in Bohemia and has both a Bohemian and a German university. Apparently over a third of the seven million people of Bohemia are Germans.

Helped Allies

Sent by the Austrians to the Russian front during the world war, Czechs and Slovaks deserted in wholesale fashion, going over to the enemy and fighting for the Russians. When, after the 1917 revolution, the Russians stopped fighting, Czech and Slovak contingents kept on fighting for the Allies. Before the end of the war a Czechoslovak army was fighting on the western front for the Allies. At the end of the war, the Allies considered that Czechoslovakia had earned her spurs and the treaty of Versailles re-established the ancient freedom of these peoples. It was unfortunate, as it seems now, that the new state's boundaries contained such a large number of Germans.

Hitler Undoubtedly Aggressive

Naturally we in this country are prejudiced against Hitler, but we hardly do an injustice to the German dictator in thinking that he is more anxious to maintain his own prestige by starting a quarrel which he thinks he can win and more anxious to secure control of the agricultural and industrial wealth of Czechoslovakia than to protect the Germans of that unfortunate country. Most people with whom we talk seem to think Mr. Chamberlain wrong in trying to give Czechoslovakia away to Germany. Many people, however, seem to think Mr. Chamberlain right in saying that, on the other hand, Britain will fight to prevent Germany forcibly entering Czechoslovakia. In this they are consistent, more consistent than Mr. Chamberlain.

Fantastic, We Think

They argue that for Germany this is but a beginning, that with the added strength of Czechoslovakia, Germany will go from strength to strength and eventually gain world power. Surely that is fantastic. That seems to us not only impossible for any nation, but before long, with the interchange of ideas brought about by modern methods of communication, people in all parts of the world will have lost any such old-fashioned desire. Germans themselves will not be satisfied indefinitely to keep their ears closed to ideas from other parts of the world.

Let's Be Modern

Our belief is that war is justified only as police action in enforcement of League of Nations decisions, and that all peace-loving nations should promote and bolster the League of Nations. However, Britain is as much entitled to go to war without League of Nations approval as any other country. We do not feel, however, that Canada should go into any old-fashioned pick-up-ideas war automatically just because Britain feels that her interests or European interests demand her participation. We feel that Canadian boys should never again be called upon to lay down their lives except, and we hope it may never be necessary even then, in enforcement of a League of Nations decision.

Whom We Owe

Actually, Canada owes no more to Britain than Britain owes to Canada. In the last war Canada helped Britain as much as Britain helped Canada. We owe no debts, except to the Canadian boys and men who died in the last war, to the Canadian boys and men who came back from that war crippled or handicapped, to the families whose boys and men never came back or came back injured, to the girls, now growing old as spinners, who would have married the boys who never came back. What do we owe to them? We owe it to them to do everything possible to avoid another such war and we owe it to them to keep Canada out of another war as long as we possibly can.

Let's Hesitate

Other nations are naturally considering their own best interests in this crisis. Canada must do likewise, and not rush to make another sacrifice in a cause so dubious that even Britain and France hesitate whether to fight or not. Surely our Canadian autonomy means nothing if it means that we go automatically into a war made by another member of the Commonwealth, without consideration of our own national interests.

Works Both Ways

There are those who would like Mr. King to say that Canada will not go into any European war, but such a statement would really be a breach of Mr. King's pledge to consult parliament before making any foreign commitments, and we do not think that he should make any such statement for non-participation any more than he should make a statement for participation. If and when parliament is assembled to make a decision on the question of war or peace everybody, including those who would suffer and lose most, will have a chance to make their influence felt through their own member of parliament.

SPENDING PUBLIC MONEY

Should public money be spent in the same way that private money is spent? And if it should, should it be spent as lavishly as the most well-to-do and generous citizen would spend it or as carefully as a business man would spend it? There are two thoughts that come to mind. One is that a public body should set an example of generous dealing and in a matter of wages should pay generously, setting an example to private employers. The second thought is that the council should conduct the town's affairs as a business, getting the greatest possible return for every expenditure. The second thought appeals to us more, for the expenditure of town money, raised from a tax on real estate, bears down on every family in the town, whether owners, renters or boarders. So it seems to us that town money should not be spent freely to set an example of generosity to others but carefully, as carefully as the humblest contributor to the town treasury spends his own money.

A Wise Mayor

That leads us to say that the town is fortunate in having as mayor Dr. S. J. Boyd. Dr. Boyd believes in spending the town money as a business man would spend his money, with one eye on the value received and the other on the bankruptcy court. There is plenty of room for generosity in the world, but it should not be out of the common purse to which the poorest homemaker contributes. Generosity should come from private sources or out of such taxes as fall principally upon those with a little to spare. Nothing helps the poor man more than low taxes on real estate.

Algebra Comes Into Its Own

Dr. Boyd was quite right in urging fellow councillors not to rush into the provision of a wall along the creek at Timothy St. when the liability may properly fall upon private persons. Dr. Boyd is doing what any business man would do, refusing to spend money until it is shown that he is under an obligation to do so. Another question at the town council meeting on Monday evening concerned payment to the town engineer of a fee of over $1,700 for his advice and supervision concerning the Strigley St. well. Members of the council rightly asked why the town should pay six per cent commission on the job when the engineer's usual fee is five per cent. A well job was a hard job, was the answer. They also found that the $1,770, which included $750 for having a member of the town engineer's staff resident here for four months, was computed as six per cent on a total cost which included the $1,770. One would need some algebra to work out a fee so computed. Members of the council wanted to know why they should pay a commission on the commission. The engineer replied that he had not charged commission on $9,000 which the well-drilling company had paid as their half of the cost of an iron removal plant, but that he would be glad to charge commission on the $3,000 instead of the $1,770. There seems no justification for him charging commission on either amount. The cost of the job on which an engineer, or architect, charges is the cost of the job to the man who is having the job done, regardless of what it may cost the contractor. The town was employing an engineer to avoid just such difficulties as made it necessary for the company and the town each to sink an extra $3,000 into the well for an iron removal plant.

From Business Point Of View

Of the three parties the engineer is the only one to profit out of the difficulties encountered. He gets a commission on the town's loss of $3,000 and talks of a commission on the company's loss. No, it seems to us that the three parties went into the undertaking together, town, company and engineer. The company encountered difficulties and were unable to fulfill their undertaking. They were heavily penalized for their misfortune, and the town was heavily penalized. And it seems to us that the engineer should have been paid strictly according to the usual arrangement, five per cent on the cost of the job to the town, not including the cost of the land ($300) and not including his own fees. The town would have saved over $250.

The Common Round

GRANDSTAND

I have been reading a good deal lately about the value of fairs and exhibitions — big ones like the C. N. E. and central Canada exhibitions — and little ones, like our fall fairs and school fairs.

The diversity of view points was enlightening and amusing. One writer, comparing the C. N. E. with the fairs held in European countries, contended that we spent too much on housing our exhibits and far too much on entertaining the crowds who came to see the displays.

He said that fairs were primarily to encourage the production of the best type of products, whether in the animal, vegetable or industrial kingdom, and he said with entire frankness, and some disgust, that those were the last things a great many people went to see. That the great majority spent their time on the midway, the grandstand or the dance pavilion.

While in contrast to this in the older lands, the buildings were plain, and the exhibits were the main attraction. I had never thought much about this aspect of our fair, but sometimes a word will help people to see more clearly, and, my eyes being opened, I saw that, while comparatively few watched the judging of horses, where we came out onto the midway, we had to fight a regular battle to reach a safe haven.

Then I read another article by a disgruntled individual which set forth in no uncertain terms, the writer's disgust with the grandstand pageant. He — the writer — said the whole show was a fizzle and an insult to Canada in the making, and to our Canadian pioneers.

I'm afraid I must have given the spectacle very superficial attention, for I didn't realize how much of the best of the efforts of our pioneer ancestors was either skipped entirely or given in such a form that the state of glory — the quality of awe, which must ever attend the memory of their titanic achievements, was conspicuous by its absence.

And here again, the performing animals — the trapeze artists, the dancers and comedians, were so much in evidence that attention was bound to focus on them.

Of course we expect good acts from elephants, dogs and horses — although I will say that the elephant which wielded the fan so gracefully, deserves a special mention for the coyness which he so successfully suggested, in spite of his unwieldy bulk.

But there are some animals that one never thinks of as possessing the histrionic instinct — I refer to steers. When their owner brought on the two well-groomed beasts, I think we all imagined we were seeing things or else that the gentleman who was staging the act had, in a slight fit of absent-mindedness, brought out the wrong animals.

But with the utmost serenity he bade these obstinate creatures "do this or do that." Well, anyone of us could SAY what he did, but where was the magic which showed us these two steers, on a teeter, balancing perfectly; one lying down and the other jumping over him; and so on and so on.

And I must confess to shedding a tear over the perfect presentation of horse, dog and man in the little western tragedy. That horse was so nearly human in its enactment of suffering and devotion. Its pathetic attempt to face the circling pseudo wolf, was in itself fine acting.

And then the lovely plump, white and black circus horses, with their perfect timing and graceful perfection of rhythmic center. When I see them I always think of the story of the circus horse that fell on evil days, and at last starving, was about to be sold to a glue factory, when a rag picker in need of a horse, happened along. He was a kindly man, if poor, and the horse was being sold for exactly what he could pay — $7, so he bought it, and although his wife and eight children never had too much to eat, they adopted the horse wholeheartedly and groomed and fed it till it began to regain a measure of sprightliness. But, although the man who sold it told the buyer that this had been a circus horse and the efforts of the children with harmonicas and jew's harps to tempt it, it would not dance.

But one day in the springtime, the rag picker was driving along when suddenly a band started playing the "Blue Danube Waltz," and just as suddenly the horse fell into the lovely rhythmic circling of the well trained circus horse, and in spite of entreaties and commands continued his gyrations — wagon and all — till the music stopped. Then came his great moment. A former circus manager saw and recognized him. Bought him and sent him to his farm hobby — a home for worn out circus horses, where, in the lovely traditional ending way, he lived happily ever after.

So, in spite of the fact that according to some people the pageant was punk and the attractions "not what they used to be," my better half and I managed to squeeze a quite reasonable amount of enjoyment out of the grandstand performance.

One thing I would like to add before I close this little talk on fairs — and that is that I heard so much dissatisfaction about the school fairs — so many contend that the children do NOT do the work — that much of it is done for them.

If this is true, no purpose is served by having school fairs, they will but tend to make the children untruthful and eager for rewards without the effort necessary to bring them.

Till he on the grandstand — or its equivalent — the slides — the coming school fair, I hope, and will see how far my judgment reaches as to what is wholly the work of the children.

But C. N. E. Fall Fair or School Fair, there's lots to see, to hear and to enjoy, and each year brings bigger and better things, even if we are not exhibitors, but only grandstand observers.

TWO AUTUMN OLD BOYS COME TO TOWN

BY RUTH DINGMAN HEBB

"Well, that old canal certainly seems to indicate that we are approaching Newmarket," said Willie, the Winter Wren, to his friend, Brownie, the Brown Creeper. "It will be nice to be back here. The north country is very pleasant, but I always think that the Newmarket birds are so friendly and really glad to see us when we come. I may spend a good part of the winter here."

"I quite agree with you," answered the Creeper, in his shy way. "There isn't a joller crowd anywhere. I'm not a very sociable fellow, as a rule, but one can't help liking the Newmarket Chickadees, Nuthatches, Juncos, Downy Woodpeckers and that bunch."

"Here we are at the north end of the town, now," Willie pointed out. "I guess you're more sociable than I am, even at that," Willie told him, "I like to spend my summers in the quiet, cool, north woods, and although I spend my winters farther south, I am always regarded as a quiet bird, too. We are alike in that."

"We are alike in other ways, too," answered the Creeper. "We are both dressed in modest brown, although we are quite different in shape. I am more like the Woodpecker, with a long, stiff tail, long, curved bill and long, curved claws, which enable me to cling to the trunks of trees and smooth surfaces in quite a clever way. You, of course, are a typical Wren, with your stubby tail, thrown up over your back. I am a little larger than you are. You're not even as big as Jenny, the House Wren, are you?"

"No, I'm a little smaller," Willie admitted, "but we look very much alike. I am regarded as a better singer than the House Wrens, though. My voice is richer and fuller. And I don't think I will be accused of doing something that the House Wrens sometimes do. It's a very nasty habit."

"What is that?" inquired the Creeper.

"Piercing the eggs of other birds, who have nests near by," admitted the Wren. "It's a disgraceful thing to do, because, of course, it destroys the eggs."

"Surely they don't do that very much, do they?" asked Brownie. "That shocks me very much."

"I really don't think they do it a great deal," said Willie, "but I'm afraid they do sometimes. I once asked Jenny, the House Wren, if she ever did it and she said that she wouldn't dream of such a thing, but that she had a House Wren cousin that couldn't seem to cure herself of the habit."

"Well, personally, I don't always believe everything that Jenny says, even if she is your cousin," stated Brownie.

"Oh, I don't mind you thinking that," Willie assured him. "After all, we can't be responsible for our cousins. Jenny does talk too much. I will admit that. But then, she's a cheery soul to have around and much more friendly than we Winter Wrens."

"Why, hello, hello, hello," chorused several voices just then. "We've been watching for you two shy chaps for the last few days. You keep so much to yourselves that we weren't even sure that you would bother looking up any of your old friends at all."

The Chickadees and Nuthatches and Woodpeckers gathered around and asked questions of the travellers.

"What was the weather like up there this summer? Was it hot? Was there plenty of food? How was the insect crop? Many Hawks up north? Are there far too many Starlings and English Sparrows there, as there are here, or is there plenty of room for everybody?" were a few of the questions hurled at the two newcomers.

"The Newmarket folks certainly want to know the news," murmured Willie to himself. "This town is wide awake."

After returning from Nova Scotia and our study of the great educational and co-operative program sponsored by the Roman Catholic University of Saint Francis Xavier I have been questioned concerning the motives of the work in that area. Is it a scheme for extending the power of Rome? Might it have tendencies towards Fascism? Are the priests just trying to increase their grip on the people?

It seems to me that a library can be a very good test of the breadth of any educational program. The variety of books available from the college and the type of books to be found in Father Tompkins' community library at Reserve Mines provide a conclusive answer to any charge of narrowness. These are libraries which I would be very pleased to use if I were living near them.

Of course the priests are playing a greater part in their communities. And consequently the churches come in for more recognition. But can one fault this? It is a progressive role they are playing. They are getting right down to the foundation of the economic life and thinking of the people. They are raising the standard of living, they are raising the level of morality, and they are stimulating the intellectual life.

I cannot find any tendency toward Fascism that is remotely similar to the efforts of big business to further dominate every phase of human life. In fact the program of education and action seeks to break the grip of monopoly. It is true that Saint Francis Xavier has stolen the thunder of the Communist party in

POLICE COURT DISMISS THEFT FATHER ASKS

The charge of arson laid against Arthur Sanders, Jr., Jackson's Point, was adjourned for hearing another week by Magistrate Robert Forsyth in police court here on Tuesday.

Bail of $5,000 has not yet been raised, so the accused remained in custody. N. L. Mathews, K. C., crown attorney, asked for the adjournment and told the court that the fire marshal's department had just completed an investigation into the burning of the hotel buildings at Jackson's Point.

A charge of stealing a sum of money around $17 laid against John Sanders, Jackson's Point, brother of Arthur, was withdrawn on the request of the father and the police were ordered to return the recovered money to the father.

"On Sept. 14, at 1:30 a. m., accompanied by Constable Alex. McCallum, we were proceeding on the road near Jackson's Point," testified County Constable W. E. Martindale. "Near the Sanders residence we saw a man coming with a pail in his hand. The man disappeared behind some bushes, so we stopped the car. Then the man came to the car and said good-night. He informed us that his father's house had been broken into that afternoon while he was away at the golf course, and that his father's safe had been broken into also.

"We went to the house and found that the screen door had been broken in," continued Constable Martindale. "When we went into the house we saw that the place had been searched, as there was wearing apparel strewn around and also money strewn around the top of a trunk. I noticed that the lock of the trunk had been forced and it did not look to me as if anyone outside had broken in. Then John admitted that he had broken open the trunk and taken out a $10 bill and six or seven dollars in change, and that he had taken a large piece of wood to force the lock. He gave me a statement after being warned that he was under arrest and that anything he said would be used against him. The statement was written by Constable McCallum in the presence of John and myself. On searching John we found some change and a bill, and we also took the rest of the money from the trunk as it was wide open. This was a total of some $40. They placed John under arrest and brought him to the jail."

The statement given by Sanders said that he had got some money at the golf course and had spent it in liquor, then he broke into the trunk and got out a ten dollar bill and some change.

"Did you question the father?" questioned K. M. R. Silver, defence counsel.

"The father was not there and I did not know his whereabouts," answered the constable.

"Was the accused there alone at the time?"

"Yes."

Constable McCallum corroborated the evidence of Constable Martindale and added that he had "asked the accused if his father was home and that Sanders answered that his father was not home and that he didn't know where he was or when he would be back and he also asked us if we knew where his father was."

"The father is present here today, but as he doesn't wish to prosecute the case I think he should testify," stated the crown attorney.

"The money really belonged to the boys, as I had put it away for extra money for them at Christmas," testified Arthur Sanders, Sr. "As far as I am concerned, John was quite at liberty to take the money."

The conduct of the accused was most reprehensible in the whole affair," stated the magistrate.

"I think the officers should have seen the father and made further investigations before laying the charge," stated defence counsel.

"I think the officers did the right thing by laying the charge," said the magistrate.

The two charges of manslaughter and reckless driving laid against Frederick Arthur Smith, Beaverton, were both dismissed by the magistrate. Defence counsel, B. O'Brien, Toronto, last week pleaded not guilty to both charges and elected trial by a higher court. On consent of the crown attorney and defence counsel, the charges were adjourned last week to allow the magistrate time to read the evidence given at the inquest and to pass his judgment on the evidence.

The magistrate stated that there was not sufficient evidence in the case to take it to a higher court and he discharged Mr. Smith.

The charges arose out of an accident near Sutton when John Peter Taylor was killed while crossing the road with an ice cream cone.

On charges of reckless driving Charles Simpson, Forest Hill, and Alex W. Cameron, Toronto, were each fined $10 and costs of $6.50 and $11.10 respectively.

Testifying in the Simpson case, Constable Alex. Ferguson stated that on Sunday night, July 21, just north of Richmond Hill, he observed a car turn out of the heavy line of traffic going south. This car, continued the officer, passed 17 cars in a row, then cut back into the line. He stopped this car a considerable distance away after it had cut in and out of traffic twice, stated the constable. Each time it cut back into the line the brakes of other cars behind could be heard squealing, the constable said.

"I think Simpson is entitled to the benefit of the doubt, as there is no hill and a clear view ahead, and also there was no traffic south-bound," stated defence counsel, Mr. Massey.

"There was a solid line of traffic going south and there are rises and dips all along that road," said the magistrate.

Norman Walsh testified that he and his wife were crossing the Queensville flats when he noticed a car coming south in the centre of the road. After tooting the horn, he said he went as far east as he could. The south-bound car then struck Mr. Walsh's car on the right side and did damage to the amount of $35. After the impact, Mr. Cameron seemed in a great hurry to get away and wouldn't even wait for the constable to come, Mr. Walsh stated.

Mrs. Walsh, Ross Mahoney, Constable Joseph Jardine, and Mr. Pulver were other crown witnesses, while Mr. Cameron, Miss Munroe and Mrs. Towne were witnesses for the defence.

The magistrate dismissed other charges of reckless driving laid against Joseph L. Seitz, Toronto, and William A. Beaton, as there was not sufficient evidence for conviction. Both charges were laid by Constable Alex. Ferguson.

B. O'Brien was defence counsel for Mr. Seitz, while Carl Oesch, Toronto, was the complainant.

Bail of $2,000 was renewed for Charles Wm. Hutton, Stayner, charged with manslaughter in connection with the death of Charles Webster in Aurora on Labor day. The inquest into the death of Mr. Webster was held in Aurora on Tuesday night.

Convicted on a charge of taking frogs from the Black river at Sutton, George Hudson and Clayton Brant, both of Lindsay, were each fined $10 and costs.

"I caught the pair once before taking frogs and let them off," testified the game warden, Ernest Prosser. "Then I caught them a second time at 3 a.m. taking bull frogs with artificial lights. They had caught three bags of frogs, which I dumped back into the river."

Russell Tansley, Newmarket, was fined $10 and costs of $4.80, or ten days, for causing a disturbance on Charles St.

A charge of causing a disturbance laid against Roy Bellar, Holland Landing, was also dismissed. The complainant, Roy Forsythe, was dismissed, as the magistrate said that the swearing done by the accused was not sufficient to lay a charge of causing a disturbance.

A charge of theft against Hubert McCullough, Jackson's Point, laid by Walter Gould, was also dismissed. The complainant, Mr. Gould, asked that the charge be withdrawn as he was not sure whether his little girl had lost the money or not.

A charge of not paying wages laid against Emerson Paris, Newmarket, by Lambert Hamilton was adjourned one week. Mr. Hamilton claimed $14.25 was owing to him but did not have a statement in court to show how many hours he had worked, or how much he had been paid on account, as he had given the statement to Mr. Paris, who was not present at the court.

KESWICK Are Planning Rally Meeting

Ladies are asked to remember the W. M. S. fall rally on Friday afternoon, Sept. 30, in Keswick United church at 2:30 p.m.

J. A. Maitland, third vice-president of Toronto Centre North Presbyterian will be present and Mrs. J. Erle Jones, third vice-president of the dominion board, will be guest speaker.

Sutton auxiliary will have charge of the worship service and an interesting conference is hoped for.

Everyone is invited, and it is hoped that especially those from nearby places will be present, as Mrs. Jones is an exceptionally fine speaker.

Mr. Jack Winch assisted Rev. C. E. Fockler last Sunday morning at the United church as Mr. Fockler was suffering from a bad cold. Mrs. Tomlinson contributed a very fine solo. Mr. Fockler preached a remarkably outstanding sermon taking for his subject "The Unjust Steward."

Prayers for world peace were offered by the congregation, led by Mr. Fockler.

Miss Jean Beidler of Cincinnati, who is visiting Miss Margaret Fockler, told a most interesting story to the children, which was greatly enjoyed by the adult members too. Rev. Mr. Anderson of Sutton was guest preacher at the evening service.

A cordial invitation is extended to all interested in the work of the Sunday-school to be present on Sunday morning, when, at the regular church hour, 11 a.m., a special promotion and rally service will be held in the church. An interesting program has been arranged.

Announcement was made that Sunday, Oct. 16, will be anniversary Sunday. Rev. E. R. McLean, general secretary of the O. R. E. C., Toronto, will be the special speaker. A concert will be held on Monday evening, Oct. 17.

Mr. and Mrs. P. B. Brown of Chicago visited last week in Keswick, where they were the guests of Mrs. Brown's sister, Mrs. Ryan Switzer. Accompanying Mr. and Mrs. Brown were their daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Winkoff and their daughter, Merlyn. They left on Monday morning for their home, after visiting in Beaverton with relatives.

Other visitors at Mr. and Mrs. Switzer's home last week were Mr. and Mrs. John McRae and daughter, Elizabeth, and Miss Minnie McCuaig, of Beaverton.

Mr. and Mrs. George Hamilton recently had as their guests, Mr. and Mrs. Winston White, Miss Mary White and Mr. Donald White of Claremont.

FASHIONS EXTREME IN HAIR STYLES, ERA LEARNS

The latest trend in fashions for the hair as seen in New York and Boston are extreme, to say the least. The Era learned from Mrs. Gordon Thompson, hairdresser, this week. Mrs. Thompson enjoyed a trip to the United States recently.

The styles are, however, very becoming to some types of women. The new "up on top" creation is very smart, but not practical for the average business girl, because of wearing a hat with them.

The newest idea of smart women in New York is to take their millinery to their hairdresser and have a style created for the new hat. For evening the hair is piled up on top of the head and feathers are dressed into the coiffure in colors to blend with or match the evening ensemble.

But if the hair isn't long enough for this there are many beautiful and different styles to choose from.

The Era goes only to readers who pay for it. In other words, the advertiser can be sure that every copy of The Era is read.

Plenty Candidates Found To Fill Up Junior Ranks

Six Of Last Year's Squad Have Graduated Into Intermediate

With almost two-thirds of last year's "Juniors," Junior C hockey finalists, available for puck-chasing duty this winter, Aurora is contemplating another strong entry of junior kids in the forthcoming O. H. A.

Although six of last year's regular squad will be absent from the line-up when Jack Frost presents the town arena with a coating of smooth glossy ice, Bert Tunney, manager of last year's squad, assured The Era reporter that this year's club will be equally as powerful as that of last.

Mr. Tunney has been in collaboration with several prospective players of junior calibre lately that he expects to wedge into the above vacancies, thus rounding out another formidable contingent to represent Aurora down the ice lanes this term.

The following players are ineligible this year, being victims of the over-age rule: Allan "Turk" Ferguson and Clarence "Fat" James, defencemen, and Allan "Shorts" Wrightman and Bill Hoskinson, left wingers. Hugh "Scotty" Mair is slated to line up with Runnymede Collegiate in Toronto, while it is rumored that Billy Willis will patrol the centre ice zone for young Rangers, also of Toronto.

Players expected to be available for this year's organization are as follows: Joe Tunney and Clayton Doolittle, goaltenders; Gord "Baldy" Bone and Ray Folliott, defencemen; Roy "Mutt" Collins, Ely "Joint" McComb, Wilbur Preston, Trevor Graham, Paul and Keith Knowles, who will tend to the offensive chores.

A young 18-year-old lad by the name of Dudley Wilcox, who displayed promising talent as a defenceman in the high school league last year, will be on hand also for a trial as soon as practice sessions begin. So, keep your eyes on the junior kids this winter and encourage them to go places.

Brother Succeeds To Post As Anglican Organist And Leader

With the recent resignation of Miss Constance Willis, organist and choir-leader of the Trinity Anglican church, her brother, John Willis, formerly of 245 Woodfield Rd., Toronto, and a member of the Associated Canadian College of Organists, will succeed his sister in that position.

Mr. Willis, who was recently married in Toronto to Miss Agnes Hearn, is well known for his talent as an organist. A student of Maitland Farmer and the well known Charles Peters of the Toronto Conservatory of Music, Mr. Willis made his debut in Aurora at the Trinity Anglican church in 1931 and 1932. Since that time he has been organist at St. Monica's church on Hilda Rd. in Toronto.

Mr. Willis and his bride are now living in Aurora on Reuben St. Both Mrs. John Willis and Miss Constance Willis are now singing in the choir.

TRI-CLUB BOWLING SOCIAL PLANNED

Plans are being made for the Bradford and Newmarket bowling clubs to visit Aurora when a social evening is to be held. Both visiting clubs mentioned have spent many an enjoyable time on the Aurora greens.

A game of Irish trebles was postponed early in the week due to cold and wet weather. This tournament will be played when the weather moderates.

Equipment For New Course Is Now At School, 200 Register

Complete equipment for home economics and shopwork, new course facilities which are features at the Aurora high school this year, has arrived, and according to Principal J. H. Knowles, industrious labor has already commenced on these subjects with over 200 pupils registered to date.

Both boys and girls have taken a keen interest in their respective additional studies with an increased registration list anticipated. The public school pupils are also receiving the benefit of the new facilities with nearly 125 of these kiddies registered for household science and manual training. The latter is an instructive educational study for boys while the household science for girls is an excellent training course for the young ladies.

A number of high school pupils, both boys and girls, are in vigorous training for the field day events to take place in the town park this Friday.

By what these local athletes have displayed to The Era reporter in their rigid training this typical fall weather, contesting schools will be forced to gaze upon their laurels until the final event has been captured.

The final events of the public school field day will probably materialize around the 30th of this month. However, that date is not definite.

Soloists Get Opportunity

Great interest has been taken in the solo classes in the York band festival, to be held in Aurora on Saturday, Oct. 1, members of the festival committee state. The fact that no classes of this type were opened at the Canadian National Exhibition this year is one of the reasons, it is stated.

In addition to the classes for saxophones, cornets, etc., it has been decided to open a class for accordion soloists. This class, it is felt, will have a great interest both in Aurora and Newmarket and throughout the county.

A good number of bands have entered the event, and the public will have a chance to hear both soloists and bands. There will be sessions in the afternoon and evening of Oct. 1, with possibilities that a morning session will be held to take care of junior entrants.

Should weather prove unfavorable, the affair will be held in the Aurora arena, with solo classes being held in Mechanics hall.

While attempting a left hand turn in a northerly direction at the corner of Irwin Ave. and Yonge St. late Saturday afternoon around 4:30, William Steadman of Irwin Ave., Aurora, was badly shaken up when a car containing three Toronto men crashed into the rear of his vehicle with tremendous force.

The Toronto car, driven by Kenneth Charters of 9 Glencastle Ave., with two companions, E. N. Gray, 54 Glenview Ave., and T. Driver Didn't See Pedestrian Struck

Held Blameless By Coroner's Jury After Investigation

Charles Hutton, driver of the car, by collision with which Charles Webster met his death on Sept. 5, was held blameless by a coroner's jury at an inquest held in the town hall on Tuesday night.

"We find that Charles Webster came to his death Monday evening, Sept. 5, in York county hospital, as the result of an accident about 6:15 p.m. on the east side of the pavement in Aurora between Catharine and Maple Sts. We are of the opinion that Mr. Webster did not see the approaching north-bound motor and collided with it at the left side near the front. We find that it was a regrettable accident and attach no blame whatsoever to the driver of the car, C. Hutton," was the verdict returned by the jury after hearing the evidence of eye witnesses.

B. Henderson, E. Graybrook and Robert Young, of Hamilton, were driving on Yonge St. some 50 feet from the scene of the accident, and aside from some contradiction in detail, their evidence agreed on the main points of the accident.

The late Mr. Webster had started to run across the road, they stated, and had passed through the line of south-bound traffic. He attempted to slow up to avoid the north-bound stream of cars but was unable to do so, the witnesses said. He had been struck by the door-handle of the car, they thought.

Pictures of the car, and testimony of Chief Fisher Dunham and County Constable Aubrey Fleury, indicated that the victim's head had struck the side of the windshield, and that he had then fallen along the side of the car, knocking off the door-handle. Hair had been found on the top left-hand corner of the car, Constable Fleury stated.

All witnesses testified that the speed of C. Hutton's car was about 20 miles an hour or less. Dr. G. W. Williams, who had attended the deceased, testified that "Mr. Webster had died of shock as a result of the accident. Coroner, Dr. C. J. Devins presided. N. L. Mathews, K. C., of Newmarket, represented the crown.

The driver of the car, Charles Hutton, also testified. He had been driving at about 20 miles per hour, and had not seen the late Mr. Webster until he ran against the car, as he was looking out of line, coming in the opposite direction.

E. H. Hoehn, of Toronto, testified that the deceased had walked, not run, into the car. Mr. Webster's leg had been hit by the front wheel of the car, he stated. He was not able to explain why the wheel and not the fender or bumper of the car had struck first.

All witnesses testified that the speed of C. Hutton's car was about 20 miles an hour or less. Dr. G. W. Williams, who had attended the deceased, testified that "Mr. Webster had died of shock as a result of the accident. Coroner, Dr. C. J. Devins presided. N. L. Mathews, K. Artist Tells Of Mexican Crafts at Leaders' School

Reads Statement on "Europe And The World At Peace"

The third meeting of the eighth fall leadership training school groups, under the auspices of North Toronto Centre Presbytery of the Young People's Union was held on Monday evening in the Aurora United church, with another encouraging turnout, under direction of Miss Vera Hunter of King, president of the Union.

Rev. Dr. E. J. Thompson of the Aurora United church, acting as Dean, opened the service with prayer and then assigned each group to their respective corners. This was followed by a very interesting and instructive talk by Alvin Hills of Pickering College, Newmarket, on "Craftsmanship, in which subject he is an instructor. Mr. Hills related his experiences in Mexico, where an ardent study of craftsmanship is now progressing rapidly. Some of the Mexican handicrafts were produced by Mr. Hills for the benefit of the gathering.

A miniature replica of a bear carved from wood was then shown with the story of how a Canadian lumberman's urge to carve was so great that he began carving one day with a very antique jack-knife. When the work became too intricate, however, he converted several old files into the necessary carving implements and succeeded in completing the above mentioned animal.

A solo, "Give Peace," was then rendered beautifully by Murray Huntley of Queensville, which was followed by the reading of a statement, "Europe and the world at peace," by Miss Hilba Patton. Extracts from a letter of a doomed soldier of the Great War were also read by Miss Patton.

She quoted the following: "Having seen the decomposed bodies of friends and buddies while trudging wearily through filth and corruption, my faith in the church has wavered to such an extent that I may be called an atheist." "That soldier did not return from Flanders."

After a short prayer, the congregation then assembled into group study as follows: "Studies in the Acts of the Apostles," led by Harold Currie of Bethel; "Home and Christian Living," led by Rev. C. E. Fockler of Keewick; "What does it mean to be a Christian?" led by Rev. Dr. E. J. Thompson of Aurora; "Worship and Devotional Life," led by Mrs. Bert Woods, author of "Come and Let Us Worship," "Christian Missions," led by Miss Beatrice Norris; "Psychology of

DO THIS: Massage his throat, chest, and back with Vicks VapoRub and tuck him into bed. Next, put a spoonful of VapoRub in a bowl of boiling water; place a newspaper or sheet over the child's head like a tent, covering the bowl too, so the medicated vapors can be inhaled for several minutes. This treatment loosens phlegm—clears air-passages—checks tendency to cough—relieves local congestion. Long after he relaxes into peaceful sleep, VapoRub's poultice—and vapor action is still bringing relief—and you can get a good night's rest too.

TO THE EDITOR

Opinions differ. Leonard Harman, King, well-known young writer and farmer, writes: "I greatly appreciate your 'defence of pacifists' editorial of last week," and asks for a dozen copies to send away. H. J. Luck, Newmarket business man, takes a somewhat different angle in the following letter.

Editor, The Era: Your editorial, "In defence of pacifists," can hardly be passed by without comment. I certainly agree that the greatest service Canada can give is to support Great Britain with every ounce of her strength. You say fundamentally you do not agree with that. If you mean that morally you do not agree with war, I doubt if you could find one amongst the unemployed or even the adventurous young men, who want war, what they want is employment and the opportunity to make homes for themselves and live the life God intended they should and get their adventures in peaceful pursuits for the welfare of humanity as a whole.

Let us take a near view at some of the fundamental causes of the present state of unrest in the world, remembering that we have had no peace since Aug. 4, 1914. We have had an armistice, since Nov. 11, 1918, of military hostilities, followed by an economic war amongst the nations right to the present day, considering with that period a preparation among the major European nations for a renewal of military hostilities.

Has Britain been a party to this preparation? To all those who have followed the trend of events the answer will be decidedly, 'No.' Britain kept her word regarding disarmament to the very danger point, so that when the sanctions question came up regarding Italy and the Ethiopian war Britain was practically at the mercy of Italy in the Mediterranean and where were the other members of that godless league of nations (the idol of the pacifists), did they make any effort to keep world order? The league was nothing more than a snare to entrap Britain. It is well described in Isaiah 8, 9-12.

Yes, Mr. Editor, we missed our chance, as you say, but the chance we missed was falling into the pit prepared by the wily enemy. It would have been playing right into the hands of Germany, Italy, Japan or Russia.

There are very subtle forces at work today to destroy the British Commonwealth of Nations, the only league of nations that can and will bring permanent peace and blessing to all the families of the earth, Gen. 12: 2, 3 (A nation and company of nations Gen. 35:11).

Until the coming into being of the British Commonwealth of Nations, this prophecy had never been fulfilled. Empires kept in subjection by force have come and gone in the course of history, and the same spirit of might is right is again to the fore and the only deterrent is the British Commonwealth of Nations.

Any move by continental powers that could draw Britain into war either for Ethiopia, China, Spain or Czechoslovakia or divide the British forces in any way would be advantageous to them and reduce Britain so that they would have greater chances of success for their scheme of world domination by force.

The British Commonwealth today is just a nucleus of that kingdom set up by the God of heaven which shall never be destroyed. Dan. 2: 44. The stone kingdom which follows the Babylonian succession of empires is symbolized in Dan. 2 by the image: Babylon (head of gold), Media, Persia (arms and breast, silver), Greece (belly and thigh, brass) and Rome (legs and feet of miry clay), symbolized again in Dan. 8 and named in verse 20. This prophecy has become history for prophecy is fulfilled. You cannot spiritualize these historical facts.

God's purpose is working through men and nations for the manifestation of the kingdom of God on earth and the chaotic conditions that are in evidence among the nations today are the Satanic opposition to that kingdom. The line is being clearly drawn between the godly and the godless nations. Mussolini, Hitler and Stalin have each declared themselves in this regard.

Mr. Editor, you ask where does the church stand on the question of peace. You say our Christian teaching seems pretty clear that we should not bear arms. Christian theology is not always Bible teaching, and I prefer the Bible. Let me ask you one question: What would become of churches and Christianity if Britain were subjected to the continental powers.

Britain dies? The gathering of the nations for the Great Day of God Almighty is on (not Armageddon, there is no such thing mentioned in the Bible). The sheep nations and goat nations take their various sides. The assessment is nearly complete and God's judgment of the nations will soon begin, and sorry to relate no prayer for peace or efforts of individuals or groups can prevent it. Rather should we pray Thy will or law be done on earth as it is in heaven. Over 1900 years mankind has had the opportunity to take God's bountiful offer and now we have no choice. The satanic power that we love so much will be subjected and the pre-millennium age will come into being to prepare for the 1000 years of peace, Rev. 20, at which time the kingdoms of this world will have become the kingdom of our Lord and His Christ, and we have the opportunity of living in that kingdom here upon this earth, ruled over by Christ upon the Throne of David, yes a spiritual kingdom with human beings living in harmony with God and nature.

We shall understand those things that man is striving so hard to find out by his own efforts, for it is promised that all secrets shall be revealed to us. But seek ye first the kingdom of God and all these things shall be added unto you.

It is at hand or amongst you. Yes, the British Commonwealth of Nations is the nucleus. Is it worth fighting for?

H. J. Luck

WHAT ARE WEIGHTS?

Editor, The Era: You may say they are to determine the value of merchandise, which is correct. But there are other weights. Paul exhorts us to lay aside every weight and the sins which do so easily beset us. And there are so many weights in the present day, hindering mankind in their ascent upward. Some tell us that man is on the way upward, but history and the present day doings, do not warrant the statement.

A certain young man went into a church for the first time and he said that the sermon was a mixture of Mahomed, Socrates, and others with Christ in the rear. Needless to say, he never went back again. It is said that England is being assailed by those that smoke cheap cigarettes.

When attending the Toronto conference a few years ago, I was one of a committee on evangelism and social service, and the question of smoking came up for discussion, and a minister said he enjoyed a smoke after his Sunday work. God pity the minister that has to receive his comfort from tobacco. After preaching saving grace, he could be a much better man than I am, but I know he could be much better without tobacco, and all the proof you would need, would be to look at his face, and see the contrast between his and the other members of the committee.

I heard a minister from the Moody Bible Institute in Chicago preach in Buffalo, and he said there are more lies told about cigarettes than anything else, and also made the following statement. He said I know a prosperous wholesale grocer and tobacco dealer, who told him that selling cigarettes was too heavy a weight for him to carry, to say nothing of the sin and injury done to others. When he asked what his annual profit was, he replied $350,000. It was better for him to quit before causing further injury.

No doubt he saw too much money going into wrong channels, no wonder people want relief, and the same minister told of 200 girls working in a factory and only one that did not smoke cigarettes. One hundred and ninety-nine modernists, and one lone fundamentalist. With the principles of Daniel, "Dare to be a Daniel, dare to stand alone, dare to have a purpose strong, dare to make it known," you don't have to be silly enough to say everybody is doing it, and don't say these smokers were Americans. For the "Onward" quotes the women and girls of Canada as being responsible for increased production and consumption of tobacco by smoking cigarettes.

I heard a minister in Hamilton preaching, that said he had a modernist minister for a neighbor that told him he would sooner go to hell on his own two feet than to Heaven through the vicarious atonement of one person. His gospel ship was already swamped, and it would not be hard to tell where he would be likely to go, and there are others whose crafts are leaking badly.

Evolution is the mother of modernism. So that it is easy for them to deny the virgin birth of Christ and hold man as equal with God. It is being said today that higher criticism is nearly through, that few believe in it now. Modernism is one vast system of false theology. It is a masterpiece of him who is able to deceive all nations. Rev. 2:1. They are all the cleverest counterfeiters of this gospel truth, and are for this reason received as biblical truths, by the unwary everywhere. He that hath an ear, let him hear what the Spirit saith unto the churches.

Victoria Square

On Wednesday of last week the cast of the play "Lena Rivers" motored to Ashworth and presented the play there to a large and appreciative audience. The dramatic society is now working on a new play entitled "The Million Dollar Butler" and expect to have it ready for presentation in a few weeks.

Last Thursday evening a quartet from the People's church, Toronto, visited Victoria Square and presented a beautiful Gospel service in the community hall. Rev. Mr. Haig acted as chairman and introduced the guests. The messages, both in song led by Mr. Turner, and the spoken word by Mr. Lindsley, were very inspiring. It is hoped that these Christian workers will pay another visit soon.

The church choir had the pleasure of visiting Temperanceville last Sunday evening and assisting in the service there. A goodly number attended the church service on Sunday afternoon last and heard an unusually fine address by Rev. Mr. Macdonald based on the second chapter of Timothy II, the third verse: "Thou therefore endure hardness as a good soldier of Jesus Christ." At the prayer service on Tuesday evening, Mr. Macdonald again spoke, continuing his series of addresses on the Lord's prayer, which are very fine indeed.

On Wednesday evening the worship service at the fall training school being held at Aurora was in the charge of the Christian culture committee of which Boyd Mount of the Victoria Square Y. P. U. is the convener. Mrs. Macdonald and Miss Mabel Sanderson also assisted with the program.

The rally day service will be observed in the Sunday-school next Sunday. It is hoped that a good number of adults, as well as children, will be in attendance for this beautiful service.

The Junior Farmers and Junior Institute held a very successful pumpkin pie social in the community hall last Tuesday night, with games and dancing included in the program.

A Mr. Handicapped

The new preacher was being strongly advised by the deacon. "Better not crack down too heavily on drink, since a couple of eminent bootleggers are staunch supporters of the church. You might as well keep off racketeering and one or two other vices; there is no point in driving needless offences." He went on with further advice as to what not to say.

Finally the preacher exploded with: "Well, what can I attack?" The deacon thought carefully. "Well, you had better hear down on the Mohammedans; there aren't many of them in the congregation."

THE OSTREKOFF JEWELS

By E. Phillips Oppenheim

A GREAT NOVEL OF LOVE AND ADVENTURE

INSTALMENT 29

Something to Live For

A man from lower down the table rose and approached Slakoff. He was a neatly dressed man, wearing a well-tailored waistcoat cut to hide, as far as possible, his disfiguring paunch. He whispered impressively in his chief's ear, the latter's face remaining all the time like a mask. When he had finished, Slakoff waved him away with a slightly impatient movement.

"There is this matter of the Ostrekoff Jewels, Anna Kastellane," he remarked. "My friend and comrade, Kohlsaat there, who has much to do with finance, has just reminded me of it. The Ostrekoff Jewels, Anna Kastellane—are you disposed to hand these over to the government of Russia?"

She made no reply for several moments. "It does not seem," she reflected at last, "that they are going to be of much use to me."

"For whom were they intended when this rash young man took charge of them?" Slakoff inquired. "Elisaveta Ostrekoff, the daughter of the Prince and Princess," she frowned.

Slakoff nodded. It was a very slight gesture, but his whole expression seemed transfixed. "A fitting but an unworthy end," he pronounced bitterly. "We will try our best, Anna Kastellane—especially with you, an educated woman—not to revert to the language and phrases of which we are heartily weary. Logically however, you and I know well that these jewels represent allegorically, if not actually, the sweat of the serfs of Russia. They exist by reason of the blood of Russia's children. They have been dragged out of the soil to adorn the necks and throats of gay court ladies and courtesans by the starving peasant, living on his crust of black bread and drunks of water. They represent one of the foul inequalities of life which the altruism of the revolution has planned to extinguish forever. They are legally confiscated to the state. I think that you yourself, Anna Kastellane, must recognize the justice of that edict. I think that you would do well to obey the law of your country in this instance."

The man with the protuberant stomach spoke. He glanced first at Slakoff, as though for permission, and then went on rapidly and with many gesticulations. "It may be," he pointed out, "that our ex-comrade, Anna Kastellane, hesitates because she has seen the fate of many of those donations in the early days of what I still boldly pronounce to be our glorious revolution. There were months, I admit, of madness. Peasants and soldiers and shopkeepers grabbed anything they could find, went off to the country and buried it and came back no more. Those things do not happen any longer. We have a rudely constituted but a perfectly efficient state bank to deal with such matters as these jewels. They will be converted into cash and they will pass into one of five accounts. That is to say, the money will be devoted toward the erection of schools in country places, the endowment of universities, the state-aided purchase of agricultural machinery, the payment of civil servants of the state or the rebuilding of houses as authorized by the Soviet Building Council. That is where the money derived from the sale of the Ostrekoff Jewels will go if it passes into the hands of the Russian government."

Their eyes were all fixed upon her. At the moment when it seemed that she was about to speak Slakoff intervened. "Before your decision is given, Anna Kastellane," he announced, "there is one thing more to be done. It is this."

He dipped a quill pen in the heavy inkstand which stood before him, and, something out of the paper which had been pressed into his hand, he drove it deliberately, scratching and spluttering, through her name. Beneath he wrote: "Anna Kastellane is pardoned this day."

(Signed) "Slakoff". He held it out to her. She glanced at it and looked back at him without understanding. In the background the hunchedback secretary was nervously snapping his fingers, his features convulsed with fury.

"The state does not bargain with individuals," Slakoff pronounced. "It is not by such means that her counsels rise to dignity and greatness. We shall not offer you a free pardon for giving up what we claim is not yours to keep. That pardon is already given. We excuse your treachery, Anna Kastellane, on account of services already rendered to the state."

"We claim, however, that the Ostrekoff Jewels belong to us, and we request that you make delivery of them. In this matter you must be guided by your own sense of justice."

There was a portentous silence. Slakoff, as usual, dominated the gathering, but they were by no means at one with him. They were reluctant to accept his ruling. They wanted the Jewels. To Anna, looking into the faces of that little company of men, the names of most of whom were infamous in the records of the day, it still seemed that she had stepped back for a brief while into the morning land of her fresh enthusiasms, when, as a student, she had thrown herself heart and soul into the cause of the people. She was bewildered. The one man whose eyes she dared not meet were Slakoff's.

"Until tomorrow," she said at last, slowly, "I could not produce the Jewels before this to save my life. Let me have until that time for consideration. At any hour or place you may appoint after mid-day tomorrow, I will present myself with or without the Jewels."

A murmur of criticism rose from the men seated around the table. Slakoff disregarded it. He looked toward Anna.

"Boris Roussky will fetch you at the appointed hour," he directed, "and may your choice be the right one."

"You will wait for me, then, Anna Kastellane," Boris Roussky enjoined.

Her eyes took small count of him. She was looking across at Slakoff, and there was a beautiful smile upon her lips.

"I think that I shall do your bidding, Ivan Slakoff," she decided. "But, whether I do or not, you are a great man, and I only pray for Russia's sake that our people may keep you where you are."

This time there was a chorus of assent, for they knew that that prayer was needed.

Anna shook her head when Boris Roussky would have ushered her into his car outside the great building in Aldwych.

"I have no need for me to infect myself upon any longer," she said. "It is barely 11 o'clock, and there are plenty of taxis on the stand there."

"I brought you here," he replied, "and I must beg of you to allow me the privilege of taking you back. It is my duty as Slakoff's ambassador. It happens also to be my pleasure."

"Well, mine," she rejoined wearily, "would be to step into that taxicab and say good-by to all of you for the present. I want to go back if you insist."

He handed her in and they drove off. They were almost at once immersed in a theatre block. Boris Roussky removed his hat and pressed his hand thoughtfully over his forehead. Of a certain type he was really extraordinarily good-looking.

"Anna Kastellane," he pleaded, "it is absolutely necessary that I talk with you, and what I have to say and what you must say in reply will take at least half an hour. Will you ask me into your flat when we get there?"

"I certainly will not," she refused. "Furthermore, I am tired to death, and I want to go to bed. Remember that I have to arrive at a very important decision before morning."

"That is where you come to my rooms for twenty minutes," he begged.

"That," she assured him, "would be still more impossible. I cannot conceive what you could have to say to me. Everything from your point of view has been wonderfully expounded tonight by Ivan Slakoff. You would do your cause more good by permitting my impressions of what he said and how he said it to remain unimpaired."

"You do not know what my cause is," he rejoined. "I am not sure that it is Slakoff's cause. I sympathize deeply with many things you said this evening. I cannot see clearly myself where we are drifting. You have shown that you have the brain of a man; I should like to talk to you as a man."

"I wonder whether I can believe you?" she asked, a little insolently. "You need have no fear at all, I assure you," he promised. "The most I shall do is to make a business proposition to you. I am parched with thirst, and Slakoff will allow no wine at any of our meetings, nor any smoking. I shall tell my chauffeur to stop at Ciro's club—we can sit up in the balcony there out of sight of everybody—and soon after midnight you can be back in Harford street."

"As you wish," she assented reluctantly.

"The measure of my country's greatness to me is the measure of greatness to which it can attain during my lifetime."

"If she goes on as she is going now, fifty years will see her still in the slough. Listen to me, Anna Kastellane. There are some of the council who think well of me. I have been offered the post here of English representative, Minister or Ambassador, or whatever it may be. I will guarantee that I attain a larger measure of recognition from the British Government than any other man would. Very well—ask yourself this—what finer center could there be in the world than London from which to secretly set out to remodel our country's future? We are of finer mold than these others. We have no real place in the present holocaust."

Anna regarded her companion thoughtfully.

"You are being much more interesting than I expected you to be," she confessed, "but I think you are running great risks in talking like this in a public place. Slakoff is a noble character and I feel that if he has his way, his life Secret Service, from which every one suffers so much, will become purified. The last official word I had was that forty of our friends have arrived here with forged passports. If there is one of them tonight who suspects your leanings you are probably being watched, as I have been since I went to Harford street."

He moved uneasily in his place. "I would rather have spoken in your rooms or mine," he muttered, "but you were immovable."

"Let us change tables," she suggested, rising to her feet. "There is an empty one farther down."

The move was made and they re-established themselves.

"You had a reason for that?" he asked anxiously.

"There was a little man behind us who might have been listening," she confessed. "Anyhow, we are completely out of earshot now. Go on, finish what you have to say. The music and chatter downstairs will probably drown your voice."

"I can propose nothing definitely," he continued, "but this is what I suggest. I go to Slakoff, tell him that I accept the position of Russian Minister, or whatever this coming Soviet Government likes to call me, to Great Britain. I take a large house in the middle of the fashionable London and we entertain—as we should have every right to do."

"Who are we?" Anna asked, suddenly alert again.

"You and I," he replied, without hesitation. "I propose that you marry me and bring me your dowry the Ostrekoff Jewels. You enter a salon and in that salon we plot for the restoration of the monarchy to Russia. It can easily be done, although it would take too long now to explain to you the various channels through which we must work. Already I have hinted at this to a certain personage whom I was instrumental in your meeting the other day."

"You mean at that luncheon—the Grand Duke?" she exclaimed.

"Naturally. You think I am raving. I dare say, but I know how safe I am. I could laugh at the tons of Bolshevik propaganda which lie in our cellars for distribution in this country. As soon as I am alone in power here it will go into the furnace."

"Do tell me," she begged, "in what country could you possibly make any definite movement in this matter?"

"In our own," he answered confidently. "Listen a little longer. What about Royalist propaganda in Petrograd and Moscow? What about holding out to the Russian public the return of the old gay life—music everywhere, the cafes and theatres all open in the old style. American capital pouring into the country, a sane Parliament with a limited monarchy like this. England knows how to govern, Anna Kastellane."

"The only trouble is that she had no politicians with brains other than the brains of rabbits to do it for her."

"I very seldom," Anna declared, leaning back in her chair, "have been more interested in my life."

His face flamed with joy. She drew her hand away from the long, nervous fingers stretched out toward hers.

"I knew!" he murmured triumphantly. "I knew!"

"You and I both know that. He could have bargained with me for the Ostrekoff Jewels with my life on one side of the scale, and he was too proud to do it. What ever happens," she added, rising to her feet. "I do not regret our conversation. I looked upon you as a very ordinary sort of person. I find that you have the makings of a magnificent schemer. You have a quality," she went on, as they passed down the stairs, "for which I never gave you credit. Perhaps in your profession it is a weakness—you are courageous to the point of rashness."

"Do you mean that I talk?" he broke in.

"I only surmise. I make no statement—except that I have a feeling that tonight we were followed and spied upon. From the first, I suspected that little man who was seated at the table near us and who looked as though he had been there all evening. He had not. I saw him slip up the stairs ahead of us."

Boris Roussky was disturbed and anxious. He had only just presence of mind enough to lift her hand to his lips.

"I have told the man to fetch you a taxicab," he said. "Very likely we shall meet tomorrow, wherever the meeting place is to be."

But when the meeting which he had in his mind should have taken place, Boris Roussky was not present. He was lying on his back in the London hospital, dying of a great inquest, which was held in due course a few days later, there was no evidence produced as to how he came by the revolver bullet through the heart which had ended his life.

We, your friends and neighbors, have gathered here this evening to show the high esteem in which we hold you. It was with sincere regret we learned of your moving from our midst, as you have proved loyal good citizens. We now ask you to accept these chairs, and as you use them, may you think of us. We send a prayer with you, that you may be to others, what you have been to us, a source of strength and comfort to those you meet in your new home, the same as you have been to us.

RUSSIAN SUPPORT

"Listen," prefaced this encyclopaedia incarnate, "Russia is in command of the most highly mechanized military force in the world today. I have seen more fighting airplanes in any 'drome in Russia than in any other of this planet. Aviation is one of the 'studies' for youth in school."

"Can one learn aviation skill by school-teaching?"

"Yes, if it's done like Russia does it. Thus, in their 'Parks of Culture and Rest,' they have high towers, from which the novice is shot up, from a trap, with a parachute attached to his body. The novice, at the right moment, pulls the rip-cord and descends to earth. The Russian soldier is trained to night hearing his own arms and munitions, so that in event of war companies of their soldiers could be dropped, from balloons or zeppelins, behind the enemy's lines."

"Mr. Miles, let me tell you something and ask you something important. In their 'Parks of Culture and Rest,' they have high towers, from which the novice is shot up, from a trap, with a parachute attached to his body. The novice, at the right moment, pulls the rip-cord and descends to earth. The Russian soldier is trained to night hearing his own arms and munitions, so that in event of war companies of their soldiers could be dropped, from balloons or zeppelins, behind the enemy's lines."

"I am confident that more than any other nation, Russia is striving to establish, and to put into effect, the co-operative principle among all ranks, professions, classes. And their aspirations go far beyond Russia; like John Wesley, the world is their parish."

"And irreligiously?" "Yes, unhappily. They have conquered illiteracy beyond any other nation. From 80 per cent of illiteracy, they have reduced it to only 8 per cent—that is in industrial areas—nationally, only 14. But, alas they have forbidden all teachers, in schools or universities, to attend a place of worship. And 25,000,000 children every day are taught hostility to

Mrs. A. M. Colville, the institute president, led in community singing and last but not least a bountiful lunch was served.

One feature of the lunch was a huge birthday cake, decorated with pink and white icing, with the lettering, "Bogart Reunion and W. I." on it. Each one present enjoyed a piece of the cake.

Mrs. Edson Johnston spent Thursday at her mother's home, also with her great aunt, Mrs. A. Boag, who is still the guest of Mrs. M. Wilson.

EVERSLEY
Church Marks
Anniversary

Corn cutting and silo filling are going along nicely. There was a slight delay Monday morning on account of rain.

Rain was much needed in some localities, though right here in the Eversley district there have been occasional showers.

The corn crop seems generally good. Frost has not affected it very much. Mrs. Norman Ferguson, Maple Avenue Farm, measured a corn stalk, near the outer edge of the field. It was eleven and a half feet high, and there was higher corn farther in. So a crop like that ensures a full silo.

There was no service in Eversley church on Sunday, as it was anniversary day in the tenth line church. Rev. Mr. Ross of Bolton was the preacher. In the evening Rev. M. E. Burch, pastor of the church, assisted in the service. A full-sized choir, composed of the church young people, contributed generously and efficiently to the church music with Miss Hughes, the school teacher, at the organ.

Rev. Mr. Ross gave two good gospel messages. In the evening sensing the fear of war, he preached from the text, "Fear not, I am with thee. Be not dismayed, I am thy God." It was a heartening message in these times.

Miss A. A. Ferguson from the Eversley church attended both services and was the guest of her cousin, Mrs. Albert McCutcheon.

On Friday Mrs. Ransom, Miss Ferguson, Mrs. Gellatly and Miss Jessie Gellatly motored to Toronto and attended the monthly executive of Toronto Presbyterian W. M. S. There was a full attendance and much business was discussed. Mrs. G. W. McKay, of Formosa, addressed the gathering after lunch.

all religion."

"In your opinion," I asked the man who was once senior chaplain to the Australian forces, "does the hope of the world lie in religion?"

"Basically, yes. And, next to that, it reposes in the hope of absolute cohesion of the Anglo-Saxon peoples of the world. This includes the United States—that's the point. Had we but a combination, in earnest, of the hearts and hands of the Anglo-Saxon countries, no power, no combination of powers, in the world could stand against them."

Miss A. A. Ferguson attended the wedding of her niece, Gwendolyn Ferguson, only daughter of Professor and Mrs. W. S. Ferguson of Toronto, on Saturday night, to Robert Ernest Wilton of London. The service was held in Bloor St. United church and the ceremony was conducted by Rev. Dr. Pidgeon. Mrs. Isa Ferguson of Richmond Hill was also present, as were many other relatives and friends.

Late Saturday night, someone driving a car failed to make the curve at the corner of Dufferin St. and the King highway at the third of King and dashed across the ditch, up the bank and through the wire fence of the field belonging to the late Ivan Folliott.

They had greater difficulty in getting down that bank and over the ditch again and left the broken parts of the windshield behind them.
